WORLD WAR I: LESSONS AND LEGACIES

to our community. This collection of eight informational posters examines WWI and its aftermath through photographs, original propaganda, and historical insights and summaries.

Visit the second floor to view the posters, check out library books and online resources on the Great War, and learn more about how the legacy of WWI continues to impact the world today.

Saturday, December 7 at 2 pm in the MPL Community Room author and ISU history professor

DR. ERIKA KUHLMAN

will give a presentation on women's engagement both for and against US involvement in the Great War.

Specifically, she'll detail how US Representative Jeannette Rankin promoted women's voting rights but protested the war, raising broader questions about female citizenship and the limits of wartime patriotism.

Marshall Welcomes Library Assistant Taylor Bunn!

Taylor has been with us since September. She was drawn to the library because of the amazing staff & her aspiration for life-long learning. Taylor has a BS in neuropsychology & is enrolled in an online paralegal program. She loves history, science, & natural history, & her hobbies include birding, sewing, & photography. Yellowstone National Park is Taylor's favorite place on earth; she loves to hike, take pictures of wildlife, & learn about our amazing planet with her husband. If she could interview one living person it would be Sir David Attenborough. Taylor is excited to be working at a place that inspires creativity, learning & the sharing of ideas!

THE FOUNDLING

by Paul Joseph Fronczak 364.15 FRO

Who are we, really? And what makes us who we are? Paul Joseph Fronczak tackles these questions in his amazing life story. After the birth of his first child, the author found that the family who raised him wasn't the family to whom he was born. Thus began a decades-old tale of a two year old's abandonment on a New Jersey sidewalk and a misidentification as "the Fronczak baby." Part true crime detective story and part can't-look-away family drama, this book will keep you turning page after page — and make you really think about where you come from. Check it out today!
