Marshall Public Library introduces...

Tammie Wilson, Technical Specialist!

Tammie has worked at MPL for over 19 years. She loves spending time with her three daughters and grandson. Her little dog Gus and black cat Finnegan (who is often referred to as a black panther) bring her immense joy. She loves the great outdoors and enjoys just about anything that involves being outside (except snakes). One of her all-time favorite books is the Hiding Place by Corrie ten Boom. As a young girl she read Born Free by Joy Adamson, which helped fuel her fondness for animals and books. She firmly believes that reading is one of mankind's greatest pleasures.

From the Stacks

FIC Whitehead, Co

Named "Nickel Boys... because their lives weren't worth five cents," Elwood and Jack face Jim Crow-era humiliation and violence at a fictionalized version of the Dozier Reform School. At Dozier, as in the book, contemporary officials uncover evidence of a century's worth of child abuse.

Despite — or maybe because of — this brutal premise, the author's spare lyricism and anguished observations (about race, corruption, willful ignorance...) ring true as life. And the bond between the two boys — stronger than the bullwhips and bullets used against them — is depicted with exquisite tenderness. In the book's stunning final pages, we witness two souls simultaneously fracture and become one.

Colson Whitehead's novel is an unforgettable meditation on friendship, identity, and legacy — on the "infinite brotherhood of broken boys." — JH

COLSON WHITEHEAD

During October and November, MPL will proudly present striking abstracts by Pocatello artist SUNNY SAGE BYBEE on the Reference Floor. Bybee's work arises from trauma and recovery. The creative process has helped her gain personal insight and develop healthy coping skills, which she enjoys sharing with others. Through her art, Bybee hopes to inspire resilience among survivors of domestic violence, substance abuse, and depression. Bybee creates her images with fluid acrylic on canvas using a process called paint pouring. Paint pouring is an unconventional painting method; no paint brushes are used to create a flowing finished product. To view more of Bybee's work, visit <https://www.facebook.com/sagestudio221>, follow her on Instagram sagestudio221, or contact her by email at sagesunny24@gmail.com

Historic Plants of Idaho Display

growing* this October & November!*

Jacquee Alvord works with the Fort Hall Commemorative Trading Post Commission. Her recent research chronicles native plants related to the Lewis and Clark Expedition and identified by botanist Thomas Nuttall.

Visit MPL's Reference Floor to find Alvord's profiles of numerous native plants; details include their historical use as food, medicine, building materials, and ceremonial implements, among other special functions. Profiles will expand as completed, so be sure make more than one viewing trip!

Alvord's ongoing efforts are dedicated to Tribal Elder Ramona Walema, who has taught her many of the old ways.
